

3 speculation and deduction
A sounds and the human voice
Breaking the silence

1 VOCABULARY & WRITING
sounds and the human voice

a How noisy is it where you work / study? What noises can you hear? Do any of the noises affect your concentration?

b Look at a list of the most annoying noises in an office (not in order). Which one do you think was voted the most irritating?

c 33 Listen to the noises, in reverse order (8-to-the least annoying). Number the phrases in b. Which of these noises do you find irritating? Are there any that don't really bother you?

d Make a list of other annoying noises. Then have a class vote on which one is the most annoying.

e 3.36 Vocabulary Bank Sounds and the human voice

f 33 Listen to the sounds and make a note of what they are. Then write three paragraphs based on the sounds you heard. Begin each paragraph as follows:

- It was 12.30 at night and Mike had just fallen asleep...
- Amanda was walking down Oxford Street...
- It was a cold winter's night in November...

"Noise is the most impetuous of all forms of interruption."
Arthur Schopenhauer, German philosopher

It drives me mad!

Office noises we just can't bear...

A According to a nationwide poll, many office workers in the UK are being driven mad by noises made by their colleagues. The problem can be particularly acute where two or three people share a small office and in companies which have 'open plan' offices. Amplifon, the organization which conducted the online opinion poll, said 'People are easily offended by sounds in the office but very few do anything about it. Most people just suffer in silence.' The most irritating noises (not in order) were:

- Other people's mobile ring tones
- People making personal phone calls
- People slurping tea and coffee
- People tapping the keyboard of their computer
- The boss's voice
- The crunch of people eating crisps
- The 'hold' music on the telephone
- The hum of the air conditioning

2 PRONUNCIATION
consonant clusters

Consonant clusters (combinations of two or three consonant sounds, e.g. difficult, spring) can be difficult to pronounce, especially if it is a combination that is not common in your language.

Three consonant clusters at the beginning of words always begin with s, e.g. scrum. Three consonant clusters at the end of words are often either plural (months), third person singular verbs (works), or regular past tenses (looked).

a 34 Read the information box and listen to the words below. Then practise saying them.

At the beginning of a word:

click	three sounds
slam	scrum
crash	scram
slarp	splash
slip stutter

At the end of a word:

two sounds	three sounds
shuts	scrubbed
sniffs	marshalled
yelled	crips
hummed	rattled

b 35 Listen and repeat the sentences.

- The scrummer when her friend splashed her in the swimming pool.
- The brakes screeched and then there was a tremendous crash.
- I hate the crunching of someone eating crisps.

c Write three sentences of your own, each using two of the words from a. Give them to your partner to say.
